

FOUR CLASSES SET FOR DRAFT IN MARION CO.

Section Board Gets Informa- tion on Setup; Sub- Groups Listed.

Marion county's young men
will be placed in four classes by their draft boards according to information
received by the board of election on the basis of questionnaires sent out by the draft board
after registration.

Class I—Includes persons
eligible for training and service in the land or naval forces.
Class II—Those persons described because of the public interest in their service by their status in their usual work.
Class III—Those persons described because of their service
in the armed forces of the United States.

In addition to these major
groups there are numerous subgroups. The class of the one which will be exhausted first in calling for service, is Class I-A. This includes men available for service
and physically and mentally fit.
Class I-B includes men who are available for service, but are fit
only for limited military duties.
Class I-C includes members of land or naval forces of the United States.

Class I-D includes students fit
for general military service, available not later than July 1, 1941.

No Group Deferments

Under the major Class II is just one sub-class, Class II-A. Persons in this group if they are engaged in employment in industry, agriculture or other occupation, or their activity in other endeavors, is found by the local draft board to be "necessary to the maintenance of the national health, safety or interests." No such deferment will be made except on the basis of the status of the individual himself, and no such deferment will be made of individuals by occupational groups or of groups of individuals in any plant or institution.

Under the major Class III there
is only one sub-class, Class III-A.
This includes persons who have dependents. Dependents are defined to include only those "who are in fact" dependent for support
in a reasonable manner on income earned by you from your business, occupation or employment."

Class IV has six sub-classes.

Class IV-A—Persons who have completed their service.

Class IV-B—Officially deferred
by the law.

Class IV-C—Non-declarant
status.

Class IV-D—Minister of religion
or divinity student.

Class IV-E—Conscientious objectors available only for civilian
work of national importance.
These may go into CCC camps.

Class IV-F—Physically, mentally or morally unfit.

Board of elections after going through four mail bagful of draft
registrations supplies yesterday
board that only part of the supplies necessary for the Oct. 16
registration are on hand. Attention of the state selective service board was called to the omission
of a letter today, officials said.

Already received are:
11,000 registration cards; 9,000
classification certificates (to be filled by registrars) men at all ages; 600 information placards;
1,000 information booklets for men who register.

Still not here are check-off lists
for registrars and large information booklets for officials.

Special Instructions

County election officials received special instructions today
from Columbus as to where people away from home on Oct. 16
should register. Such persons should register wherever they are,
appearing at the nearest precinct polling place. They should give the registrar their home address
and eventually the registration
card will reach their local draft board.

WASHINGTON SAILS WILLKIE PUTS WAR QUESTION UP TO PEOPLE

JAPS TO BOMB BURMA ROAD

Tokyo Press Intimates Strong Action Will Be Taken Against Highway.

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, Oct. 9.—Japan will close the Burma road with bombs
if Britain persists in her determination to reopen this "backdoor" route linking China with vital sources of war materials,
the Tokyo press intimated today.

Declaring the recent acquisition of airplane bases in French Indo-China has given Japan a tremendous strategic advantage
against China, newspapers asserted the Japanese now are ready for direct action.

Further moves are unnecessary,
the prominent paper Nichi Nichi
said, because Japan already has explained to third powers her determination to eliminate the supply routes of Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Japan need no longer conduct
any diplomatic negotiations with Britain," said this commentary.
"The effect of stationing Japanese forces in Indo-China should now be displayed."

Yomiuri commented in the same vein.

The Burma road, built after Japan had succeeded in seizing
most of China's seaboard, follows a tortuous 2,000-mile route
from Chungking, provisional Chinese capital, to Rangoon in British Burma, which has a common frontier with Indo-China.

Japan's acquisition of Indo-China bases therefore has shortened by some 350 or 400 miles
the distance which her bombers
would be compelled to fly in an attempt to cut the road.

Some sections of the Tokyo
press expressed belief the scheduled reopening of the Burma
road Oct. 17 was only the prelude to more extensive British-United States assistance to China in the form of loans. The road was closed July 17 by an agreement
effective for three months.

AREA WILLKIE POST GOES TO MARIONITE

Walter D. Moore Chairman for Three-County District.

Walter D. Moore, president of the Marion County Willkie-for-President club, has been named chairman of the three-county district of the Independent Willkie
clubs, it was announced today.

He will direct the activities of the organization in Marion, Union and Wyandot counties. Within the next week he will announce appointment of chairmen for Union
and Wyandot counties.

The movement is being expanded to include a woman's division.
Mr. Moore reported, announcing simultaneous appointment of Mrs. O. M. Young of Marion as chairman of the Marion county
women's division.

The women leaders in Union
and Wyandot counties will be appointed by the men whom Mr.
Moore names as chairmen.

The Independent Willkie clubs,
headed nationally by Oren Root
of New York, one of the original Willkie backers, are open to persons of all parties, as the name indicates. It is not a Republican movement, Mr. Moore said.

In the Marion county club, for example, are a considerable number of Democrats among the some 1,100 members, he said. The club
first formed in Ohio, was organized the day after Willkie's nomination.

State headquarters of the Independent Willkie clubs, from where Mr. Moore's appointment
came, are at Cleveland.

WILLKIE PUTS WAR QUESTION UP TO PEOPLE

Candidate Declares He Will Let Public Decide Issue If Elected.

By The Associated Press

ENROUTE WITH WILLKIE
THROUGH CONNECTICUT, Oct.
9.—A refusal to "appease the dictators" and a pledge to let the
people say whether they want war
were coupled by Wendell L.
Willkie before he started a combined train and auto campaign
tour of New England today.

In a series of New York City
talks last night, the Republican presidential nominee called for a strong national defense but advised against "shouting insults at the dictators or any one else."

"Does any one in this audience
think that the President is really trying to keep us out of war?" he asked a flag-waving crowd in a Bronx High school auditorium.

"No," came a shout from many of his listeners.

"Are there any international understandings about American entrance into the war that our citizens do not know about?"
Willkie continued.

Right To Ask Question

"After all, I represent in this campaign millions and millions of voters, and I think I have a right to ask Franklin D. Roosevelt about American participation in the involvements of Europe and Asia at this time.

Three hours later, addressing
a midnight crowd near the 125th
street railroad station in Manhattan, he said:

"If you elect me, this country
won't go to war until the people
say they want war."

Willkie, contending that a
"dagger in the back speech" does
only harm, expressed his belief
"in the policy of the other Roosevelt, who said, 'Speak softly but carry a big stick.'"

If he is elected, he added, his first job would be to speed up
defense production by revitalizing
industry.

"We can best aid Great Britain and at the same time serve
our own interests by producing promptly and in large enough
quantities supplies which we both need," he said.

"We are being edged toward war by an administration which
is careless in speech and action.
We can not aid Great Britain by going to war right away."

The United States is so un-
prepared, the candidate asserted,
that should it go to war now, all available supplies would have to be kept here.

Speaks In Harlem

Willkie's comments on defense
and foreign policy were intertwined with a variety of other topics in his series of talks, which included one to a loudly cheering
Negro audience in Harlem.

His first speech, in the Bronx,
contained criticism of Edward J.
Flynn, Democratic national chairman, who lives in Harlem.

He demanded that Mr. Roosevelt make public his views on a fourth term, a proposal which brought long applause, whistles
and cheers.

In his Harlem talk, delivered in a ballroom, Willkie pledged equal treatment for all races in event
of his election. On the way to the hall his auto caravan was booed
by groups of Negroes, but during his speech he received frequent applause.

Willkie charged that the Roosevelt administration "under the leadership of Ed Flynn is attempting to take the election by illegal and fraudulent processes."

The Republican nominee made
his accusation in the home county
of national democratic chairman
in his speech in the Roosevelt
High school in the Bronx.

For several weeks the Republican nominee has been critical of Flynn, terming him "The Boss of the Bronx."

After his Bronx tour, Willkie returned to Manhattan, appearing before an audience which stamped
its feet and shouted "We want Willkie."

The Manhattan appearance was in the congressional district of Representative Bruce Barton, Republican.

NCO GROUP FORMED

F. W. Bacon Heads Officials and Coaches Organization.

Organization of the North Central Ohio Officials and Coaches association was completed at a meeting here last night at the Y.
M. C. A. Officials elected are Francis W. Bacon of Marion, president; Nick Wasylik of Bucyrus,
vice president; E. Paul Hoffman of Marion, secretary; and Thayer, secretary-treasurer.
Thirteen members attended.
Plans for the next meeting Oct.
22 at the Marion Y. M. C. A. were made. The organization is open to all coaches, officials and others interested in athletics. It has been formed to continue a study of regulations pertaining to ath-

will give its attention to a study of football.

BRITAIN ADVISES CITIZENS TO QUIT FAR EASTERN AREA

POWDER-KEG SITUATION IN BALKANS BECOMES MORE INVOLVED

CLUB TO BUY "GLASS BOOT"

Altrusa Members To Give Mod- ern Medical Device to City Hospital.

Purchase of a Paevex boot for Marion City hospital was voted by the Marion-Altrusa club at a business session last night at the home
of Miss Eloise Tschannen of South Prospect street.

The glass boot, latest device
used in the treatment of arthritis
sufferers, the hospital with the latest type of incubator, costing $385, also paid for with receipts
from sales tax stamps.

Miss Margaret Parker, superintendent, has long desired this particular piece of equipment, club
officials said today. Its purchase will be in line with the club's civic welfare work. The club last spring presented the hospital with the
latest type of incubator, costing
$385, also paid for with receipts
from sales tax stamps.

The glass boot, shaped like a large glass jar, is an electrical apparatus which can be fitted over arms or legs. By negative suction, a vacuum is created and arteries and veins are dilated, stimulating circulation. It gives suction on extremities and brings considerable relief, one Marion physician said today.

Persons wishing to join the Al-
trusa club in its latest project,
may turn their tax stamps over
to any member.

The sum of $5 was voted by the club last night towards payment for the two iron lungs
which have been ordered for the hospital through the efforts of a drive launched by Miss Lillian McCarthy.

Saturday, Nov. 9, was set as the day for the club's rummage sale,
the place to be announced later.

On Tuesday evening, Oct. 29,
the club will join with Rotary club in a dinner meeting at Hotel
Harding.

New Legion Officers Installed

Four Posts and County Group Start Year at Joint Meeting.

Floyd Harpence of Westerville, vice commander of the Ohio Department of the American Legion, told an audience of 200
Legionnaires of Marion county,
gathered last night at the Legion
Dugout for the annual county-wide installation of officers, that the American Legion, organized 21 years ago at the close of the World war, has now "come of age" and is in a position to be active in the leadership of America's youth in the present world
crisis.

Installation of officers of the Marion county Legion organization, headed by M. E. Baldwin of 166 East Washington avenue, as county commander, and of the posts of Marion, Prospect, Caledonia and LaRue was conducted by John H. Duncan of Columbus,
sixth district vice commander
and membership chairman.

The program at the Dugout was preceded by a dinner at Hotel
Harding.

Legionnaires present were
Mr. Harpence, county vice commander; Mr. Baldwin, county commander; and Mr. Duncan, sixth district vice commander.

HOSPITAL HIT BY NAZI BOMBS

All 108 Aged Patients Feared Killed in Early Attack Today.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Oct. 9.—German fighters hidden in the clouds attacked London in mid-morning today after overnight bombings
in which big explosives smashed
an air raid shelter which housed 160 persons and three wings of a hospital housing 108.

Eight were killed in the shelter
and an undisclosed number of others were injured.

The bombed hospital was described as possibly the hardest-hit building in London where the raiding up to midnight was reported to be the most severe the city has undergone.

Three wings, two housing men
patients and one housing women,
were crumpled. Most of the patients were 80 years old or over
—almost all of them permanent invalid cases.

As rescue crews dug for victims in the debris it was feared that not a single patient escaped either death or injury. How many were dead could not be determined because many had not been accounted for long after dawn.

Daylight Alarm Early

The first daylight alarm was sounded some time after sounds
of distant firing, apparently high above the clouds, were heard in London.

Raiders also were reported over the east coast. One town was divided-bombed and machine-gun-
ned. In early afternoon eight German planes were seen over the Thames estuary, apparently headed for London. They were met by heavy anti-aircraft fire, and turned back when British fighter
planes rose to challenge them.

After the night attack glass
strewn streets, heaps of rubble
that had been homes and workshops, and lengthening casualty
lists were reported from 102 sections of England. Thirty-eight of the areas of new bomb damage
destruction were in England,
which again bore the fullest force
of the bombings that started England's third month of severe air
siege.

Next to London, the hardest hit
area was the "tattered" triangle
down the Thames to the barbed wire guarded southeast coast.

Across the choppy strait that is the no man's land between the leaguered Britain and the next
east Nazi camp, the royal air force kept steadily firing a series of heavy bombs at the coastal German base, containing a large fleet with the main battle fleet, but only a few ships were seen.

From Calais to Boulogne, the German fleet was reported to be in the English Channel, and the Royal Navy was reported to be firing at the German fleet.

Writer Wonders Whether Burma Road Leads to War

By DEWITT MACLEZIK

Does another great war lie at the end of the Burma road which winds its way up through China's primeval mountains?

Or is it likely (as some seem to think) that threats will not be backed by deeds?

Those are questions which call
for the most careful consideration,
since there can be no doubt that
a dangerous situation exists.

A good deal of bluff has been tossed about (and has been got away with) by one or another in the Far East since the Japanese in 1931 set their war-machine
rolling in conquest across the rich plains of Manchuria.

That was a speculative venture
—a "feeler"—evolved from the grandiose idea of ousting the western powers from Eastern Asia and establishing Japanese hegemony over that vast and rich
area. Japan swung what was in part a bluff and made it stick—
thereby breaking trail for Messrs.
Mussolini and Hitler.

There is a vast difference, however, between the position today
and that of 1931, or for that matter of many later dates.

Japan and Britain, both hard pressed in life and death wars,
have reached the point where neither is willing to retreat. The stakes are too great, and the investments too colossal.

So Britain appears finally to have called for a showdown over the Japanese policy which would deprive England of the vast police-economic influence it long has exercised in eastern Asia. And Nippon, having thrown every resource it has into its expansionist
program, and mortgaged its future
for generations, is equally set on carrying it through.

It is one thing to see the logical
aspects of the position—and another to figure out what may happen. The trouble is that we no longer can depend on logic being followed, for minds are being moved by passion and desperation.

U. S. Might Defier Her

Considering the critical stage of Japan's program of expansion by force, it would be logical
from my viewpoint to expect her
to be prepared to fight England if necessary.

However, while Japan may be ready to battle the British, it is equally logical to expect Tokyo
to try to steer clear of such a war
if it fears America will go to John Bull's aid.

It may be expected, too, that Japan would side-step drawing fire from Russia. Only yesterday
a resumption of Russo-American talks in Washington revived conjecture on the possibility that Far Eastern developments might establish a basis for active collaboration between Washington, Moscow and London.

There are many sound reasons
why Japan should avoid war with America. A very potent one lies in our naval might and unlimited resources.

Should Japan find herself in war with Britain, and also discover that her fears of American and Russian intervention are justified, she would be in the least in a desperate position,
especially with her lack of resources. Neither Germany nor Italy could help her. She lacks bases for operations against distant objectives like the Dutch East Indies.

$5,000 FIRE RAZES HYBRID CORN PLANT

Wiring Is Blamed for Blaze Southeast of LaRue.

LA RUE, Oct. 9.—Fire last night
razed a building used for drying
and seasoning hybrid corn seed
on a farm two miles south of here owned by Mrs. Roy Grantham
of Marion and occupied by Homer Heller, who saved the estate
estate, said the fire apparently started from defective wiring. Mr.
Heller, one of the largest producers of hybrid corn seed in the county, owned the equipment in the burning building.

He discovered the fire about a week last night, and immediately
called the volunteer fire department, which attempted to extinguish the fire with chemical fire
fighting equipment, but failed.

The fire destroyed a building
valued at $5,000, and burned
about 100 bushels of corn seed.
The loss was covered by insurance.

The Stars Say—

For Thursday, Oct. 18

While there are excellent prospects of promotion, preferment, dignities with various tokens of favoritism and esteem from those in power, yet these splendid promises may be beset by signs of opposition, obstruction, and other unfriendly gestures, possibly at the hands of elders or old-established institutions, judging by the lunar transits of this day. From all directions there may arise difficult situations to test the endurance, sagacity and good judgment in well-nigh hopeless circumstances. But precaution, persistence and being able to convince superiors of merit, stability and high purpose should win.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves launched into a year in which they may have to break down stubborn resistance, difficult situations as well as hostility from elders and old organizations, by proving stability of character, soundness of judgment and patient resolve to win out against all odds by the merit and practicability of projects and proposals. Employers and those in standing and financial power may be convinced by proper approach and tactics, with resulting progress, advancement and signs of preferment and favors as well. Be alert to all duplicity and sign papers with especial caution.

A child born on this day may have many sterling traits of character and much energy and ambition, which it may be required to demonstrate to some who doubt and stubbornly oppose. In the long run it will gain place and prestige with preferment from those in high positions.

"CHORUS" CRACKS DOWN

By The United Press
RENO, Nev.—For its annual costume "She-Jinx" co-ed party of Tri Delta sorority of the University of Nevada, the girls wore costumes representing songs. When, however, a male intruder was found in their midst, the "songs" joined in an "Anvil Chorus" and the youth after being properly punished was planted in the middle of the floor and doused with water.

Milk Mixture For Stomach Ulcers

A recent medical discovery now being used by doctors and hospitals everywhere has proven unusually successful in the treatment of stomach ulcers caused from excess acid. It is a harmless preparation yet so effective that in many cases the pains of stomach ulcers disappear almost immediately after it is used. Also recommended for gas pains, indigestion and heartburn due to acidity. Sufferers may now try this at home by obtaining a bottle of Lactin from their drugist. Lactin contains this new discovery in its purest form. Easy to take. Just mix two teaspoons in a half glass of milk. Costs but little and sold under an absolute guarantee that it must satisfy or money refunded. Lactin for sale by Eckerd's and drug stores everywhere.—Adv.

THE ROAD TO SHANI LUN

by Rita Mohler Hanson

YESTERDAY: Lynn Britton is being whisked into Mongolia in an armored limousine as guest in theory of the ruling Prince. She feels herself a captive, however, although she cannot still a certain interest in handsome Temu Darin, her father's ally. Lynn will be met first by the Duchess of Shani Lun.

CHAPTER 12

Duchess With Horns

THEY arrived with the rising sun at the extensive camel camp belonging to the Prince of Shani Lun on the edge of the desert of yellow sand.

Lynn saw that the Duchess had fulfilled Temu's request. She stood waiting to welcome them on a fine Ningxia rug in front of her blue traveling tent. A long, embroidered robe of the brightest blue hung from her plump little shoulders to her plump little feet. But the remarkable, the unbelievable, the extraordinary thing about her was her hat. Over a silver cap foundation soared a pair of large, curving, corrugated horns.

And from the tips of the horns hung long braids of hair reaching to her elbows. Perched between the horns was a jaunty little decoration shaped like an angel-foot tin, the cone supporting a blob of something that had a distance suggested strawberry ice cream.

Temu grinned at the look in Lynn's eyes. He explained, "Gersing inherited that hat from her mother, a girl who came to Shani Lun many years ago from the region of Unga."

"Horns," murmured Lynn faintly. "Horns! Wait! I'll find American milliners are pictures of this!"

"They must be about like for horns," said Temu, stepping out of the car and hastening to greet the Duchess.

Bula took out his knitting and set to work while the French mechanic opened the car door for Lynn. She had hastily extracted a small automobile from the built-in case, and though suspecting that he had seen her, dropped it into her purse. She watched him anxiously as he lowered his eyes and slipped back smartly to let her pass. Evidently she had found a friend.

"Help me," she whispered in French. His lips barely moved but she caught the words in English. "At the well, my friend."

Lynn's color was high as she watched Temu greet the Duchess affectionately and sloop to press his cheek to hers before he introduced the women to each other.

Gersing could speak a bit of English. She reminded Lynn of a shrewd and kindly little Navajo lady she had known in California. They felt an instant liking for each other and stood for a moment, hands clasped, looking into each other's eyes. Then the Mongolian woman reached up and pressed her palms to Lynn's cheeks and drew her hands over the girl's body and said something swiftly in her own language to Temu.

"What is it?" Lynn asked. "Gersing thinks in terms of horse flesh. She says you're a fine, upstanding filly!"

Lynn laughed. "She's a sturdy little pony herself."

Temu translated and the Duchess chuckled merrily and drew Lynn into the tent. It was furnished with a lined with gorgeous rugs and chests and two duck-down pillows. Temu asked to be excused to set up the radio and get in touch with Delun.

"Tell the Prince what I think of him," Lynn advised. "He smiled and shook his head. 'The poor fellow's ears are not enough as it is. He has other troubles!'"

"He'll have more before he gets through with me."

At that moment Little Bamboo came in and greeted Lynn saying she had arrived the night before with the motor caravan. She and Gersing then conducted Lynn to a comfortable bath of English make contained warm and fragrant water.

"The Prince knows how to take care of his guests," Lynn thought aloud.

Little Bamboo bowed and giggled. "Temu Darin says you like much water. You also samee pink lotus."

Lynn kicked off her oxford. "Me all samee sardine," she retorted disgustedly.

Little Bamboo didn't know what sardine meant but she thought it was an extremely funny-sounding word.

Inspection

Lynn breakfasted in a spacious dining tent. The Duchess had removed her head dress and jobe and donned a sturdy leather over-garment opened up the sides for ease in riding. Later she took Lynn for a trip about the camp, exhibiting the fine, fat-humped Bactrian camels, of which there were more than two hundred and fifty, and the ponies and ponies.

On this tour of inspection they rode horseback with Lynn's horse, a handsome high school boy with a white automobile. They will not walk ten feet if they can ride.

It seemed the camels were being starved for several days to get their stomachs "tucked up" for the arduous journey ahead of them. This process was supposed to lessen the danger of chilling or overheating while on the march.

The place was handled like a military camp. Blue Mongolian traveling tents were set in precision behind long streets lined with boxes of provisions and freight in the distance could be seen the gray walls of a Chinese trading post.

Lynn asked for Sherlock. He had gone on to Pailichao. Of the young officers who had been with Temu and Sherlock in the temple, she recognized only one when the men had changed to Mongol garb.

"Chin Pak is his name," Temu told her later. "He has a Mongolian mother and a Chinese father and he's a clever man with his head. He handles the expedition's finances. We soldiers of Shani Lun are loyal to our country though all of us cannot claim pure Mongol blood." There was a twinkle in his eyes as if, in a veiled way, he was answering the question about himself he had sensed in her mind that morning.

After a while Lynn and the Duchess returned to their tent that she might rest a while. Temu Darin did not appear at their evening meal and it was with an effort that Lynn kept from asking about him. Nor had she caught a glimpse of the Frenchman since their arrival that morning. "But I shall meet him at midnight," she thought.

She wished to roam about the camp again, but Gersing insisted that they go to bed. Tomorrow would be a hard day.

"Especially if you've never ridden a camel," said Temu, suddenly appearing in the tent for a few minutes. "Poor girl, I pity you tomorrow night!"

If she had her way, Lynn was thinking, she wouldn't be with them tomorrow night. "I'm wide awake," she protested. I can't go to sleep with the chickens."

"We have no chickens," he bantered.

"Then whatever it is we're going to sleep with. The dogs are still barking; even the kites are prowling."

He sat beside her cross-legged for a moment. "On the desert we go to bed with the camel. The camel cannot see to eat in the dark. He is a kind of chicken I think."

"Look at his neck," laughed Rumford Baking Powder.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

Breakfast Dodgers

The American institution of breakfast, I am given to understand, is in danger of at least partial eclipse. The danger affects household where both parents work. There is little or no danger in this when there are no children, but with a school child in the household, authorities agree, a serious problem may arise. Malnutrition in American school children of grade school age is much more frequent than supposed. The school child often cannot depend upon the likelihood of getting a nourishing lunch so breakfast becomes the mainstay of the nourishment for the early part of the day. When both mother and father have to rush off to work early in the morning, leaving a child more or less to get breakfast for himself, the result is a badly balanced meal, mostly out of cans.

The school child's breakfast is the most important meal of the day. It should be hot, it should be nutritious and it should have a plentiful supply of fresh foods. It should include a fruit, a well-cooked oatmeal with cream and sugar, milk, and, possibly, eggs or meat.

Prunes, oranges, baked apples, applesauce, peaches, grapes, cantaloupes, raspberries, toast, butter, cream of wheat, jam, graham crackers, jelly, cornmeal muffins, bacon, marmalade, fish, toasted corn flakes, cocoa, cracked wheat, wheatena, rice, puffed rice, farina, rolled oats, germs, hominy grits, chicken, wheat cakes, maple syrup, waffles, sorghum.

If you, the parents, see to it that your children have a good variety of those things for breakfast, you need not worry.

What the school dietitians are up against is the malnutrition of school children due to the carelessness and indifference of parents.

Take charge of the breakfast of a nation and you may be indifferent to who makes the laws or the songs either.

Malnutrition in children of the school age is a very common cause of deficiency in scholarship. In its early and less developed forms it is not always easy to detect. It

Lynn, "When he walks it wobbles like a chicken's."

"And he's hen-minded," Temu jumped to his feet. "We could go on playing games like this all morning, but we shall. Good night, Lynn. Good night, Gersing."

Lynn lay a long time with a smile on her face. There was something about Temu Darin that had made her desire with all her heart to "frustrate his plans, and there was a deep necessity in herself to prove that she could."

Long after the camp had quieted down and the Duchess was sleeping deeply, Lynn rose, and put on the clothes she had laid out, apparently for morning—high boots, breeches, and a leather jacket.

She stood for a moment in the doorway, looking out across the sand plain cut by a boulder-strewn ravine separating the camp from the Chinese trading post. The moon was high and bright. Except for occasional barking of the dogs somewhere to the rear of the camp, and the gurgling and snuffing of the camels, she heard no sound. Banks of fleecy white clouds sailed across the sky.

Lynn hesitated a moment taking stock of herself. Her assets were one unloaded automatic, a sum of money, a strong, healthy body, a determination not to go to Delun against her will, and a rendezvous with a French mechanic. One thing more, almost forgotten—the letters and the mirror left behind. Her liabilities were unknown.

She looked at her wristwatch—midnight. She stepped softly past Temu Darin's tent and hastened down the path to the slim shadows of the bare poplars about the well. The Frenchman had not yet come, but when she looked back at the camp she fancied she saw a form passing between the two tents. A cloud obscured the moon for a few minutes and sailed on.

She leaned against the trunk of a tree and waited. Five minutes, ten, twenty-five. She began to feel cold. And if she waited much longer, she feared Gersing might awaken and miss her. Finally, she decided that he was not coming. Something had happened to keep him or he had changed his mind. She knew he had a lively fear of Temu Darin's displeasure.

She looked thoughtfully in the direction of the Chinese trading post. She might find someone there to help her. At any rate, having this opportunity she would be stupid not to try. She started out swiftly and boldly, welcoming the brisk physical activity after her long cold wait. But as the sand deepened and dragged at her feet her strength began to fail. She had been under a terrific strain for many hours, experiencing more terror and distress and emotional disturbance than she had known before in all the years of her life.

She stopped and looked about. Distances were deceiving. She seemed to be as far away from the mud buildings of the trading post as when she had started, yet a considerable distance separated her from the camp. Suddenly she saw a low shadow sinking after her.

frequently goes without recognition for a long time because the child is less under rigid supervision at this age than he was when younger.

Early recognition is, however, important, and the energies of health and school authorities are being directed more and more to this end.

Ready for November 5

MARION voters are going to be out in full force for their battle of the ballots on November 5, according to forecasts based on results of the registration which came to a close Monday night. The total of registered voters is believed to be the highest in the city's history and that may be taken to presage a similar record on election day.

The same situation is reported from all sections of the country. Interest in Americanism and all that it represents was never greater and the people evidently are aware that the first line of defense for the rights they enjoy is at the ballot box. By this we mean that the privilege of free and independent voting is a part of the foundation of our democracy and when exercised to its fullest extent is a prime indication of national strength and security.

There are elections, too, in Hitler's domain, and Stalin's, but what a difference! Here a large vote is evidence of the power of the democracy. There it is proof of the power of the dictators, for in compliance with their orders the people vote—and how! Here, the people vote on nobody's orders and how they wish.

And there is every indication that the march to the polls November 5 will by its magnitude serve notice to the world that the American people's system of self-government is in high gear and functioning at the peak of its power.

Until the Big Stick Grows

AMERICA'S "big stick" is still no more than a sapling so there is plenty of reason for this country to follow the sound advice of another Roosevelt and talk softly.

There has been all too great a tendency of Americans in general and some of the people in high places in particular to bluster and brag and shout insults at the dictators—in fact they have been talking in much the same tone as the dictators themselves. The difference is that Hitler backs up his words with the most powerful military machine the world has ever known. Compared with the Nazi juggernaut, this country's war vehicle looks pretty much like a kiddie car.

Loud talk never hurt anybody but it has brought trouble to the man who did the talking. Any youngster who attends the cowboy movies can tell you that the big, blustering loud-mouth always comes to no good end when the soft spoken, cool tempered hero finally reaches for his guns.

The little man in the street who walks up and "sasses" a big bully is inviting a poke in the nose and the nation which adopts the same attitude is going out of its way to look for trouble. America needs to proceed with all speed in building up its defenses into a big stick impressive enough to convince any and all international bullies. Even then, Teddy Roosevelt said, the wise nation still walks and talks softly.

Someday in the future this country will want to be friends with all people again and the course to real friendliness will be the smoother if there are not so many hard words to be ironed out of the memory of those lands.

D. A. R. Golden Jubilee

THE National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, holds its golden jubilee this week with exercises in Washington attended by representatives of the 2,350 chapters scattered throughout the country.

The D. A. R. has performed inestimable service by keeping alive the memories of those days when this nation was founded. Sometimes its zeal for tradition has been criticized but it has never let America forget the nation's founders and the things for which they stood.

It is essential that someone call the nation frequently to remembrance of "Washington and Valley Forge, of the fight for freedom and events from Independence Hall to Yorktown and the D. A. R. has assumed this duty and has carried it forward with industry and devotion.

America salutes these patriotic women on their anniversary.

In for Dinner

THE United States has the first of several parties of distinguished visitors from Latin America as its guests. In individual life when a man wants to be a good neighbor he invites some guests in for dinner and shows them around his place. That's just about what this country is doing toward its neighboring republics to the south.

There has been all too little visiting back and forth between the nations of the American continent. These guests from the south have been entertained hospitably and they have been given a show of American preparedness which is certain to increase their faith in the practicability of the Monroe Doctrine and the solidarity of the American republics.

As more of these visitors come from south of the equator to see for themselves the vitality of America and to feel the genuine hospitality which it feels for its South and Central American neighbors defense of the hemisphere will be strengthened against any dangers, either military or economic, which may come from without.

All America joins in a hearty "Welcome, Neighbor," to the visitors.

News Behind the News

Labor-Defense Opinion Presents New Problem for Administration.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Mr. Sidney Hillman was only reaching for a jam jar for John L. Lewis of the C.I.O. when he got that labor defense opinion from Attorney General Jackson—but he spilled it all over himself and the administration.

The C.I.O. boys had been needing his former friend and C.I.O.er for a definite decision outlawing manufacturers from defense contracts as soon as the biased national labor relations board finds them guilty and before they are convicted by the courts. Lewis tried it first on Congress and twice his attempts to put that edict into law was defeated. Then he attempted to push the President in.

Bearing down on Hillman, Lewis had the support of a group of C.I.O. labor leaders who are among Hillman's consultants in a little group he calls his advisory committee. They pressed him so hard for specifications in their meetings, that his shouts, "Don't ask me, I'm not a lawyer" became a familiar refrain.

Now with the elections only a few weeks off and Lewis still unpledged to a presidential candidate, Hillman sought the opinion of Attorney General Jackson, with the timely results already noted.

Looking for Window The administration started looking for a window as soon as the unpopular reaction to the Jackson ruling began to roll in. They have already managed to acquit themselves about half way out of it in the following fashion.

War and navy department officials have made no secret of their intention to negotiate contracts with firms found guilty of unfair practices by the NLRB but by no one else yet, (those whose cases are on appeal to the courts.) National defense is more important than the NLRB say the admirals and generals. They promise their policy will be "flexible." The case of each individual offending company will be considered separately. The basic policy will be to grant the contracts unless the company declines to promise to follow a fair labor policy for the future. Even this basis will apply only to negotiated contracts and not to bid awards.

The national defense commission (probably including Mr. Hillman now that the returns are in) is joining this escape until after the elections at least. It settles nothing, Lewis and the C.I.O. leaders will still be pressing for definite specification. The dangerous implications of the Jackson ruling endangering the success of the program, will be delayed.

Board Unpopular The root cause of the whole mess into which the administration plunged itself on this question is not the surface labor issue, but in the unpopularity of the labor board. It is generally discredited. Its rulings have been subject to charges of bias, favoritism, and pure C.I.O. organization campaigning, to such an extent as to destroy popular respect for its decisions until they are passed on by some less partisan tribunal. The Jackson ruling had the effect of making NLRB condemnations final as far as defense contracts are concerned, before an impartial court could review them. If the board was popularly recognized as a fair judicial tribunal there would have been no uproar.

Confidence Mr. Roosevelt apparently believes the election is over. And he agrees with Gallup on the result (without considering the 4 per cent margin of error and the large number of doubters recorded therein, who may swing the result the opposite way.)

When A. F. of L. President William Green came in to invite Mr. Roosevelt to address the American Federation of Labor convention just two weeks after election on Nov. 18, the President expressed neither shock nor surprise. He called his engagement secretary, Pa. Watson, and told him to mark that reservation down.

Draft Queries Answered

Registrars Prepared to Deal with Those Who "Won't Talk."

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—(Questions arising from selective service are as thick as grasshoppers in a swarm. Following is further effort to answer some of them.)

Q. Suppose I refuse to answer the questions put to me by the registrar?

A. The registrars already have instructions how to handle you. Recalcitrants will be urged and argued with, but if they persist, witnesses will be called and the case referred to the United States district attorney. For willfully obstructing the draft, a man is subject to the same penalty as for willfully dodging the draft: not more than five years in the penitentiary, nor more than $10,000 fine.

Q. I am moving to another city the day after draft registration. What should I do?

A. Notify your local board immediately when you change address, no matter when it occurs after registration.

Q. What is the difference between the registrars and the local boards?

A. The registrars are merely the registration machinery (in most cases it will be the same as the election machinery) and after October 16 their task will be finished. The local boards are permanent, voluntary, unpaid groups of three or more men with paid clerks, presiding over an area of approximately 30,000 population. Attached to the boards, but not a part of them are the examining physicians and government appeal agents. It will be the duty of the board to classify all registrants and notify those men called into service.

Q. In our local board district there are many factory workers and there is no labor man on the board who has any understanding of labor problems. Is there anything we can do about it?

A. Yes. Appeal to your governor and ask him to appoint such a representative of labor to the board. Those in charge of selective service at national headquarters here are particularly eager to have these boards made up of men of high standing who are representative of the community they serve. In the case of appeal boards it is stipulated that the boards should include one member from labor, one from industry, a physician, a lawyer and where applicable, one member from agriculture.

Q. Is there any way I can find out now what are the physical requirements for men who will get into Class 1?

A. Not specifically, but roughly (and with a few minor changes) they are the same as those for the Army. For example, the Army accepts men only if they are five feet four or taller; selectees may be placed in Class I who are only five feet or taller.

Q. I would like to do my military service immediately. Can I enlist for one year?

A. Yes. The Army recently opened enlistments to men desiring to serve only one year and having served that year, you will have the same status as a man who has served under selective service—not again subject to call for military training in peacetime. If you enlist in the National Guard, now being called into training, you will be subject to membership in the guard for two years after your year of training, but only at the army, during two weeks of summer encampment, or in the case of an emergency for which the guard is called out.

Q. I am 19, have finished high school and would like to take my military training before I enter college. How can I do it?

A. You may enlist either in the National Guard or in the Army. Youths of 18 or over, with permission of their parents, are accepted for branches of military service.

Need Seen for U. S. To Sell Itself Again on Democracy To Resist Nazi Influence.

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

A DEMOCRATIC army for defense against Nazism must know for what it is fighting. It must be permeated through and through with an aim and a faith superior to the clan and the faith animating the enemy. It must, itself, represent and embody the cause for which it fights. It must not pass the revolutionary spirit to the opponent. It must seize and use it as one of its most effective weapons.

The Turps

Ethel Gets the Bright Idea That What Nation Needs Most Is Two Presidents at Once.

By DAMON RUNYON

Mr. Joe Turp Writes From Brooklyn:

DEAR SIR: Last night my wife Ethel and I there are a great many Democrats in the country aren't there? I see certainly there are. She sees there are a great many Republicans aren't there? I see that's right, baby. So see which are there the most of?

I see well sometimes there are more of one than there are of the other but it about even up in the long run. She sees and they are all the same kind of people in everything except politics aren't they? I see well I suppose they are, sweetheart. I see they are all Americans if you if what you mean?

She sees yes that is what I mean. And she are all entitled to the same rights aren't they? I see well that is the general idea but let me see Ethel. I see I should not have let you get this far. I see I can see that you are going to get me into something and I think I had better go to bed.

Ethel sees O you always run away when am trying to learn something Joe. How can I find out about things unless you tell me? I see well what is the next question, I see will be it is a lily. She sees I want to know why we don't have two presidents. One for the Republicans and one for the Democrats. I see ha I thought so. I see I should have gone to bed. Ethel sees well answer my question Joe.

I see so you mean two presidents at the same time? She sees certainly—one for the Republican and one for the Democrats.

I see well that is the craziest thing I ever heard of Ethel. I see we can't have two presidents at the same time. I see we are going to have an election pretty soon and the fellow who gets the most votes will be the president and that is all there is to it. I see I never heard of such a daffy thing as two presidents at the same time.

Ethel sees there you go Joe Turp getting yourself worked up over nothing. Suppose Mister Roosevelt is elected president again. He is a Democrat isn't he? I see you can say I again Ethel. She sees well then the Republican will be mad won't they? I see they will not be any madder than they are already Ethel. She sees but suppose Mr. Willkie is elected president. He is a Republican isn't he? An won't the Democrats be the ones who are mad then Joe?

I see now I know I made a mistake staying here to listen to you, Ethel sees well don't g away Joe. If the Democrats had a meeting and sees they wanted Mr. Roosevelt to be president and the Republicans had a meeting and sees they wanted Mr. Willkie in there why wouldn't it be nicer to just put them both in an office and let them have a president and we would have all the bother of elections and all the fights in the neighborhood and everywhere else.

I see what fights Ethel? She sees well some body in Schultzes hit my Uncle Ben in the eye last night when they were having an argument about Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie. I see O I suppose your Uncle Ben gave you a goody idea about having two presidents at the same time? Ethel sees no Joe I thought it myself. My Uncle Ben thinks there should only be one president at a time and that he should always be Mr. Roosevelt. But I think if we had two presidents we would have a lot less trouble in this country and Mr. Willkie and Mr. Roosevelt are both such nice fellows.

More than 200 guests attended a tea given at Hotel Harding by Mrs. F. E. Guthrie and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Howard F. Guthrie.

It was Saturday, Oct. 9, 1920. The Cleveland Indians won the fourth game of the World Series at League park in Cleveland against Brooklyn, 5-1. Covaleskie pitched for Cleveland and Mauniaux, Cadore, Marquard and Pfeiffer for Brooklyn.

Mrs. T. H. Burke of East Center street returned from a visit in Piqua.

Mrs. Clark Miller of Lima was a guest of Mrs. F. R. Mann of South Vine street.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hinman at their home five miles north of Marion.

Rapidly turning his campaign trip through the middlewest into an open attack against the "Wilson league of nations," Senator Harding went into Kansas and Oklahoma during the day on the final lap of his journey. He had left Marion with the intention of making four speeches, but thus far he had made approximately two dozen. His first scheduled stop today was a Wichita, where he spoke briefly to students at the Kansas State College of Agriculture. Herbert Hoover was also making speeches in behalf of the Republican ticket. He declared "the Democratic party has failed in its responsibility."

OHIO CAMPAIGN TEMPO GROWS

speech last night before 800 persons at Bowling Green.

A month ago, Davey predicted that the state fair would show a deficit and said he would await the figures "with interest."

The candidates disputed each other's economy claims in campaign addresses yesterday.

Davey asserted at Napoleon that Bricker's administration spent $23,000,000 more than the Davey administration, while the governor told a Lorain audience that he saved the state $5,146,969 in 1939 through reduced personnel and maintenance costs.

Hits Reserve Fund

Advocating larger unemployment compensation, Davey charged that the Bricker administration increased the unemployment benefit reserve fund $50,000,000 "at the expense of the unemployed in order to impress the silent bosses of big business."

Bricker said that the state employment service placed 2,136 persons in private jobs last year.

At Oberlin, the governor asked an audience in the Oberlin college chapel to oppose the expansion of federal authority. He said Ohio was doing all it could to maintain local government.

Davey, at Wauseon, declared that if he were elected his administration would take no control over the homes of old age pensioners.

"It is the right of every man and woman to have and to hold their own home," he said.

Burton at Berea

At a dinner for infantrymen at Berea, Mayor Harold H. Burton of Cleveland, Republican candidate for U. S. senator, advocated strong fortification to prevent attack. He said a year of military service would better equip men to take their place in industry.

The candidates are active again today. Davey and John McSwaney, Democratic candidate for U. S. senator, scheduled speeches in Ottawa, Kenton, Bellefontaine and Urbana; Bricker will appear tonight at Ashland; and Burton was in Youngstown.

Democratic headquarters in Wooster announced that Claude R. Wickard, secretary of agriculture, would attend a farmers' rally Oct. 19 at Kidron.

Sen. Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati Republican, campaigning for Wendell L. Willkie, declared in Cape Girardeau, Mo., that New Deal economists regarded national defense as another "stupendous experiment in prosperity spending."

He said the policy was "dangerous" because "we are stimulating artificially a number of war industries and building up employment which sooner or later must come to an end."

Eyes of Workers Soon To Determine Fitness for Jobs

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Oct. 9.—The eyes soon will determine the kind of jobs industrial workers are given, a woman eye specialist predicted today.

Plant safety and efficiency depends upon the placing of employees in work best suited to their vision, Dr. Hedwig S. Kohn of Hammond, Ind., reported before the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology.

She credited the national defense program and its demand for trained skilled labor for helping to focus industrial management's attention upon visual as well as manual and intellectual aptitudes.

In a survey described as the first to study demands modern machinery makes on workers' eyes, Dr. Kohn noted five defect groups and found a marked difference in visual requirements in the occupations of 16,000 workers examined.

At one extreme was a crane operator who had to judge distances 150 feet away, and at the other a hosiery factory worker whose pay depended on her ability to do piece work eight inches from her eyes.

Eye tests generally used by company doctors were declared inadequate for certain functions. A familiar vision chart became impractical because employees memorized it.

GREEN CAMP METHODIST WOMEN AT LORING HOME

Special to The Star

GREEN CAMP. The Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist church met Thursday with Mrs. Flora Loring. The meeting was in charge of Mrs. Mary Owens, vice president. Devotions were led by Mrs. Wilford Porter. Twenty members answered roll call. Other officers are president, Mrs. Clyde Beaver; secretary, Mrs. Cameron Casio; treasurer, Mrs. J. B. SCHOOL HEAD SPEAKS BEFORE GALION CLUB

Special to The Star

GALION, Oct. 9.—Work of the National Youth Administration was discussed in a talk by Superintendent of Galion Schools O. E. Hill when he was the speaker Tuesday noon at the Galion Kiwanis club meeting.

The NYA furnished employment to needy high school students, and the allotment is as much as $8 per student per month, Mr. Hill said. The amount distributed is based upon the school enrollment. During 1939, the Galion schools received $72 per month for the program, Mr. Hill stated.

The program is under the direction of the local school administration, and consists of any constructive educational work including secretarial and library work, care of campus and buildings and painting school equipment.

Two new members welcomed at the meeting were E. R. Widrig and E. R. Garverick, both teachers in the public school system here.

Social Affairs

MISS LOUISE CUNNINGHAM was a guest speaker at a meeting of Iota Alpha Chapter, Pi Omicron National sorority last evening at Hotel Harding. She gave a talk on the restoration of Williamsburg. Plans were made to attend the state convention at Mansfield Oct. 25 and 27, and a contribution was made to the fund for the purchase of an iron lung for the City hospital. Guests were Mrs. Tobias Edinger of Chillicothe, Mrs. Nachtrieb of Charlotte, C. H., Va., Miss Pansy Rauhauser, Miss Jessie Henderson, Miss Margaret Wolfley and Miss Lucille Russell.

Mrs. L. A. Aze of Mt. Vernon avenue was hostess last evening for the first meeting of the club year for the Tuesday Study club. "News of Today" was the roll call topic and the program hour opened with the singing of "God Bless America" and the Salute to the Flag. Mrs. Albert Merkle, president, extended greetings and papers were given by Miss Edna Dutton on "Progress of American Culture" and Mrs. Kelley Vance on "Art Projects of WPA, Source of Propaganda." Mrs. Merkle was named a delegate to the Central district conference at Coshocton Oct. 15 and 16.

A dinner was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Tanner of 201 Barnhart street Sunday in observance of the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Tanner and Mrs. Maude Moore. Three present included Mrs. and Mr. Wynne and daughter Chloe, Mr. and Mrs. Kirt Fields and daughter Maxine, Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Moore and son Billie, Roy Hale, Paul Moore and Miss Ina Allinder, all of Richmond, and Mrs. Virgil Wynn and sons Casper and Richard of York and Mr. and Mrs. Clemy Moore and son Robert of LaRue.

Miss Barbara Fralich of 387 Bialne avenue was hostess last evening to the El Dorado Literary club. The theme, "Decorative Art," was carried out in two papers, "Antique and Period Furniture," by Mrs. Karl Feisborn, and "Modern Furniture," by Mrs. Ellis Wilson. Miss Mary Gracely was named to take charge of the annual sale of articles made by the club.

Three tables were filled for bridge at the T. W. M. club meeting last evening with Miss Catherine Watson of 147 Clover avenue. Mrs. Robert Porter won the award for high score and Miss Eleanor Flach won the floating award. Miss Thelma Coon was consoled. A Halloween party was discussed. Guests were Misses Thelma Coon, Eleanor Flach and Margaret Snare. The hostess, Mrs. Katie Watson, assisted in serving punch at small tables decorated with fall flowers.

Mrs. Jay Malish explained the 1940-41 program, "Human Nature Craves Novelty," at a meeting of the Women's Century club last evening with Mrs. James R. Smith of Franklin street. A supper preceding the meeting was in charge of the social committee, Mrs. Bennett Bindley, Mrs. Ellis Houghton and Mrs. H. W. Alexander. Mrs. Ernest Carl of Columbus and Miss Margaret Dickerson of Baltimore, Md., were guests. The meeting in two weeks will be at the home of Mrs. Ray R. King of Mt. Vernon avenue instead of with Mrs. Carl Lettler as scheduled in the club program.

Members of the Lenders Study club of the Old Society held a cook out at Camp Owens Monday evening. Singing was led by Mrs. Marguerite Gehring and a report from the council was given by Mrs. V. H. Barnhill, who was named a permanent delegate to the council. Miss Emily Wolfel was elected program chairman and serving with her as a committee will be Onan and Ruth Rowland. Folk dancing provided entertainment.

SEARCHLIGHT CLUB AT PROSPECT OPENS SEASON

A social meeting at the home of the president, Miss Esther Click, Monday evening opened the tenth club year for members of the searchlight Literary club of Prospect. A Mexican theme was carried out for the meeting, which was in charge of the Officers, Miss Click, Mrs. Charles Toms, vice president, Mrs. Paul E. Louwer, secretary, Mrs. Andrew Remlinger, treasurer, Miss Lucille Cheney, Miss Mabel Pritchard and Miss Florence Almendinger, program committee.

The tallies were very somber and favors were clay links. Cacti centered the small tables and in the dining room the table was centered with a wooden bowl filled with gourds, pumpkins, squashes and peppers.

Awards for the evening went to Miss Mary Frances Cohagen, high; Mrs. Robert Emery, low, and Mrs. Fred Wilson, floating.

Sorority Outlines Arrangements for Friday Benefit

PLANS were completed for the benefit bridge and style show to be sponsored by Gamma Mu chapter, Delta Theta Tau sorority, Friday evening at the Star auditorium, at a meeting of the members last evening with Miss Louise Foran of 291 East Church street. During a social hour Miss Eula Bricker, a charter member and past officer of the chapter, was complimented with a shower in honor of her approaching marriage to David Glasser next Saturday.

A part of the proceeds of the benefit will be turned over to a fund for the establishment of an isolation ward at the City hospital, the sponsors announced. Play will begin at 8 o'clock and tickets will be on sale at the auditorium in charge of Mrs. Edward A. Dutt and Miss Maxine Alspach. Committees in charge include Mrs. Nellie Minard, finance; Miss Lucille Brubaker, prizes; Mrs. Edward A. Dutt, tickets; Mrs. Louise Foran, cards; Mrs. Hugh Wright, tables and chairs; Miss Hazel Foster, auction; Mrs. Earl McWhorter, tallies; Mrs. Glen Penry, refreshments; Mrs. Ray Sutton, style show; Miss Marjorie Lewis, publicity.

Appointments for the shower were in green and white, the colors Miss Bricker has chosen for her wedding. Showers from the gifts, arranged on the dining room table, were green and white streamers to which were attached "philosophical" verses. Assisting Miss Foran as a hostess committee were Mrs. Bowie Morgan, chairman, Miss Hazel Foster, Miss Maxine Alspach and Miss Lucille Brubaker. Founder's day will be observed in a meeting at Hotel Harding Oct. 16. Marriage Meddlers

BY ADELE GARRISON

Setting the Scene for the Important Meeting Of Veritren and Queen Olga.

THERE WAS no truthful answer I could make to Queen Olga's comment upon her daughter's probable reactions to the recovery of the emeralds, and I was relieved, indeed, when she put a query I could answer without stultifying myself.

"Was there anything else your father wished of me?" she asked, and with a negative answer, I took the hint of my departure.

I sped back to the room I shared with Lillian, passing Otto laden with luggage. In the hall, and when she had unlocked the door and looked it again, she spoke quickly, insistently.

"You didn't tell Olga she could spill the beans about the emeralds to Ollina, I'm sure you didn't, but I just want to be certain, for, of course, mother-like, she put the question."

"Yes, she did," I answered, a bit heavily, "but I told her my father had said nothing on that score, and she acquiesced at once. She's terribly thrilled over telling Phil about them."

"Of course she would be," Lillian said, and then she faced me with a question that I knew was the result of speculations she had made while I had been absent.

No Time

"Have you any idea floating around your noodle as to the particular thing concerning which Phil wants our advice before seeing Olga?"

"Not a glimmering," I told her truthfully. "I haven't had time for any speculation. What do you think?"

"Something that I haven't time to tell you," she said, "for old Phil will be barging in here pretty soon now. I was sure I heard Otto down the hall a minute ago."

"I passed him in the hall," I told her.

"Then we haven't any time for discussion," she said. "Theatrical speaking, old Phil's a 'quick change' when he wants to be. There's only one thing I want to ask you, and that quickly. I want it a lot."

"It's yours for the asking, whatever it is," I told her, smiling.

"I hope so," she said, "for I want it a lot. I have a pretty shrewd idea of the general tenor of Phil's forthcoming remarks and appeal for advice, and I want you to take a firm grip on that Puritan conscience of yours and throttle it until it's unconscious. You'd better let me take the lead in the advice-giving. Although in other circumstances, I'd be the one to keep mum. But I can't trust your high ideals if the forthcoming conversation is what I think it's going to be. So if you'll just follow my lead and agree with me, you can make as many 'mental reservations' as you wish, and when your conscience comes out of the ether, you can assure it that you were coerced and tortured into doing what I commanded. Do I make myself clear?"

Clear as Crystal

"As the much abused simile of crystal," I told her laughing, albeit a bit ruefully. "And I'll gradually leave all the initiative to you. But don't make me any more a Sapphira than you have to."

"I'm not going to ask you to tell a single tarradiddle," she said. "I'm simply going to request that you do not air a yen which you share with many other good and misled people. There! What did I tell you? There's Otto now!"

It was indeed Otto's loud and clumsy knock which was pounding upon the door. When I opened it, he bobbed his head in awkward greeting.

"Mr. Veritren say he is—at your service," he intoned, spacing the words, and we had a sudden mischievous vision of the great impersonal schooling his chauffeur in the message. Otto is a heaven-sent motor driver, and a stout and faithful bodyguard. For these reasons, Philip Veritren considers him indispensable to him; but when Otto has any social message to deliver, he and his master are mutually worn out by the time it is given.

"Thank you, Otto," I said. "Will you please tell Mr. Veritren we shall be right over."

He bobbed his head again and left us, and when a minute or two later we went over to see our old friend, Otto had disappeared. But Mr. Veritren's first question was not a bid for advice.

"Will Olga see me?" he asked as eagerly as a schoolboy in the throes of his first love affair might have done.
